CASTELLO  PASQUINI

CASTIGLIONCELLO

HISTORY

Castello Pasquini is located in Castiglioncello, along the Etruscan Coast in the province of Livorno. The Castle and the large park in which it is immersed fully represent the Tuscan identity, mixing the charm of the Mediterranean scrub, the sea and history.

The Castle was built starting in 1889 by Baron Lazzaro Patrone on the property of Diego Martelli, who was forced to sell his estates due to disastrous economic conditions. The construction first incorporated and then definitively erased the old farm of Diego Martelli made famous by numerous paintings by the Macchiaioli set in Castiglioncello.

The new pretentious building, which takes Palazzo Vecchio in Florence as its reference, is characterized by the eclectic style in vogue in Tuscany at the time, with strong neo-Gothic references. The dominance, even symbolic, over the town is accentuated by the imposing terrace walls crowned by bastions. The construction of the Castle in fact marks the birth of the seaside resort, becoming its emblem.

However, hindered by his fellow citizens in his ambitious plans, Baron Patrone gave up his properties, until he sold the Castle and the park in 1938. Other owners succeeded him, until in the second half of the 1940s the Castle became the property of the Pasquini family, whose name it still retains, and who made significant changes especially in the park.

PRESENT

At the beginning of the 1980s the Castle, in a state of abandonment, was purchased by the Municipal Administration of Rosignano Marittimo which used it as a cultural center.

Since the end of the 1990s the management has been entrusted to the then Armunia Association, now a Foundation, and to the cultural project created specifically on the multifunctionality of the place, making it a location for weddings, events, exhibitions and conferences.

Today, Castello Pasquini is spread over the original four floors, in addition to a tower and a small cellar, with a surface area of about 600 square meters per floor. Thanks to Fondazione Armunia, the facility boasts thirty years of experience in organizing events that retrace and pay homage to its unique history.
